Appendix B: Percent Minority

This appendix lists the percent minority for each country in the dataset and the sources of the data. Additional notes sometimes give further information for each country.

Only minority groups that can overcome the threshold of exclusion—that is, win a seat in the legislature if they are sufficiently united in their voting behavior—are counted here as minority groups. For countries with sub-regional constituencies, I used regional data as a proxy. Group members who live outside regions where the group can pass the threshold as part of the majority group, as they cannot contribute effectively to the group’s electoral success. Furthermore, groups are included only if a majority of group members live in regions where they can overcome the threshold of exclusion.

Whenever possible, I collected ethnic data needed to estimate minority group size from official sources. I preferred data based on the citizen population rather than on the total population where it was available and made special effort to locate it for countries in which it would likely produce important differences. I used regional data below the statewide level to determine whether a group had the potential to surpass the electoral threshold and then to calculate its size if it did. If ethnic data is unavailable or group size is heavily contested, I consulted unofficial sources to arrive at a reasonable estimate. Disputes over group size almost never would have made the difference in the assessment of a group’s ability to pass the threshold.

Andorra

None.

Antigua and Barbuda

Barbudans, 2.1%. Source: 1991 Census.

Argentina

None. Note: Indigenous Argentines do not exceed the threshold of exclusion in any of Argentina’s provinces according to the 2001 Census.

Australia

None. Note: Aboriginals do not form a majority in any region.

Austria

None. Note: Neither Croatian nor Slovene speakers exceed the threshold of exclusion according to the 2001 Census.

Bahamas

None. Note: Whites do not form a majority in any region.

Costa Rica

None. Note: Black or Afro-Costa Ricans are slightly below the threshold of exclusion in Limón Province. Indigenous Costa Ricans are below the threshold of exclusion in all provinces. Source: 2000 Census.

Cyprus

None. Note: Includes only territory under the control of the government of the Republic of Cyprus. Turkish Cypriots cannot vote due to the division of the island. Source: CIA World Factbook.

Czech Republic

Czech Republic 1 (First Electoral System, 1990-98)

Moravians, 13.2%. Source: 1991 Census. The share of Moravians exceeded the 5% legal national threshold.

Czech Republic 2 (Second Electoral System, 2002-10)

None. Note: Moravians composed only 3.7% of the population according to the 2001 Census, below the 5% legal national threshold.

Denmark

None. Note: All calculations for Denmark exclude the Faroe Islands and Greenland. The German minority in Denmark is smaller than the threshold of exclusion.

Dominica

Caribs, 2.9%. Source: 2001 Census.

Caribs are concentrated in the Carib Reserve, which is coterminous with Salybia constituency.

Dominican Republic

None.

El Salvador

None.

Estonia

Russian speakers (including Ukrainians and Byelorussians), 14.1%. Source: Based on the ethnic nationality and citizenship questions, 2000 Census.

Only citizens are included in calculation of the minority share of the population. The share of Russian speakers includes Ukrainians and Byelorussians as all are Russophones and use Russian as their primary lingua franca.

Finland

Finland Swedes in Helsinki, Uusimaa, Varsinais-Suomi, Vaasa, and Åland constituencies, 5.5%. Source: Statistics Finland, 1999.

Sami fall below the threshold of exclusion in Lapland and all other constituencies.

France

None. Note: None of France's linguistic minorities form a majority in any region. Muslims also do not form a majority in any region.

Germany

None. Note: Danish, Sorb, and Romani minorities all fall below the threshold of exclusion according to the Germany Minority Report.

Ghana

Mole-Dagbon in Northern, Upper East, and Upper West Regions, 11.2%. Source: 2000 Census.

Ewe not counted as a minority group because a majority live outside Volta Region.

Greece

Muslims in Rhodope and Xanthi Prefectures, 0.9%. Source: 2001 Census.

Muslims did not exceed the threshold of exclusion in Evros Prefecture.

Grenada

None.

Hungary

None.

Iceland

None.

India

Total: 41.5%. Bengali speakers in West Bengal and Tripura, 6.9%. Marathi speakers in Maharashtra, 6.5%. Telugu speakers in Andhra Pradesh, 6.2%. Tamil speakers in Tamil Nadu and Puducherry, 5.5%. Gujarati speakers in Gujarat and Daman and Diu, 4.2%. Kannada speakers in Karnataka, 3.4%. Malayalam speakers in Kerala and Lakshadweep, 3.0%. Oriya speakers in Orissa, 3.0%. Punjabi speakers in Punjab, 2.2%. Kashmiri speakers in Kashmir, 0.5%. Manipuri speakers in Manipur, 0.1%. Lushai/Mizo speakers in Mizoram, 0.1%. Source: 2001 Census.

Several groups are excluded either because speakers of the language do not comprise a majority in the relevant state (e.g. Assamese speakers in Assam) or because a majority of speakers of a language do not live in states where they are in the majority (e.g. Nepali speakers in Sikkim).

Ireland

None. Note: Protestants insufficiently concentrated to exceed the threshold of exclusion in any constituency.

Israel

Arabs, 18.5%. Source: Central Bureau of Statistics, 2003.

Italy

Italy 1 (1992) and Italy 2 (1994-2001)

Total: 3.9%. Sardinian speakers in Cagliari-Sassari-Nuoro-Oristano, 2.3%. Friulian speakers in Udine-Belluno-Gorizia-Pordenone, 0.9%. German and Ladin speakers in Trentino-Alto Adige, 0.6%. Valdotain (French or Franco-Provençal), 0.1%. Sources: 2001 Census, Ethnologue, Euromosaic, and Fondation Emile Chanoux.

Speakers of Italian dialects (i.e. languages viewed as part of the Italian family of dialects or languages) are not treated here as linguistic minorities with the exception of speakers of Sardinian. Most speakers of Italian dialects also speak standard Italian; Sardinian is the only legally recognized minority language among Italian dialects. Italy also recognizes Albanian, Catalan, German, Greek, Slovene, Croatian, French, Franco-Provençal, Friulian, Ladin, and Occitan as minority language but only the members of language minority groups listed above exceeded the threshold of exclusion defined by the Imperiali quota for the 1992 elections in any constituencies.

Italy 3 (2006-8)

The lower threshold allows the same set of minorities to win seats as were able to overcome the threshold in Italy 1 and 2.

Jamaica

None.

Japan

Japan 1 (1990-93)

Ryukyuan Language Speakers, 0.9%. Source: Ethnologue

Japan 2 (1996-2009)

Ryukyuan Language Speakers weighted by share of single-member districts of total seats, 0.5% for 1996 and 0.6% for 2000-2009. Ryukyuan speakers are concentrated in Okinawa Prefecture where they form a majority. Under Japan 2's mixed system, parties based in Ryukyuan speakers could win seats in Okinawa but would be too small surpass the threshold to gain seat awarded by proportional representation. The share of Ryukyuan speakers is accordingly weighted by the share of single-member districts among all seats (200 of 300 in 1996 and 180 of 3000 from 2000 onward).

Latvia

Russian speakers (including Ukrainians and Byelorussians), 20.2%. Source: Population Register, 2004.

Only citizens are included in calculation of the minority share of the population. The share of Russian speakers includes Ukrainians and Byelorussians as all are Russophones and use Russian as their primary lingua franca.

Lesotho

None.

Liechtenstein

None.

Lithuania

Total: 7.9%. Lithuania utilizes a split system with 70 MPs elected from SMDs and 70 MPs elected by PR off of party lists in a single national constituency. Poles form 6.7% and Russians form 6.3% of the population. Among Poles, 2.5% live in municipalities with a Polish majority; 0.4% of Russians live in municipalities with a Russian majority. The minority percentage reported here is the weighted average of the share of minorities above the threshold for list seats and the share of minorities that form a majority in municipalities with the proportion of PR and SMD seats, respectively, serving as the weights. Source: 2001 Census.

Luxembourg

None.

Malta

None.

Mauritius

Rodriguans, 3.0%. Source: 2000 Census.

Creole, Muslim, Sino and Franco Mauritian are all not sufficiently concentrated in any region on the island of Mauritius such that they form a majority or that a majority of members of that group live in the region. Source: A.J. Christopher, "Ethnicity, Community and the Census in Mauritius, 1830-1990," The Geographical Journal 158: 1(March 1992), 57-64.

Kazakhs in Bayan Olgii, 3.4%. Sources: 2000 Census and Alexander C. Diener, One Homeland or Two? The Nationalization and Transnationalization of Mongolia's Kazakhs (Washington, DC and Stanford, CA: Woodrow Wilson Center Press and Stanford University Press 2009), 124, 175.

Namibia

Total: 45.5%. Nama/Damara speakers, 11.5%. Afrikaans speakers, 11.4%. RuKavango speakers, 9.7%. OtjiHerereo speakers, 7.9%. SiLozi/Caprivi speakers, 5.1%. Source: "Namibian languages." <http://www.biodiversity.org.na/dbase/NamLanguages.php>. (Namibia Biodiversity Database, NaBiD). Viewed 6 July 2009.

At 1.9%, English speakers exceed the threshold of exclusion but English is not included as a minority language because it is a second language for most of its speakers. English serves as Namibia's official language precisely because it is not the language of any ethnic group. The great majority of Namibian whites speak Afrikaans or German. Afrikaans is also the language of most Namibia's Coloureds. The 2001 Census, based on households rather than individuals, confirms the size of all groups except for SiLozi/Caprivi speakers.

Netherlands

Frisian, 3.9%. Source: "Frisian." <http://taal.phileon.nl/eng/frisian.php>. (Language in the Netherlands, Streektaal.net). Viewed 21 January 2013.

Based on the estimated percentage that understands Frisian according to a 1994 survey and the population of Friesland according to the 2001 Census.

New Zealand

New Zealand 1 (Single-Member Plurality, 1990-93):

None. Note: Māori are not regionally concentrated.

New Zealand 2 (Mixed-Member Proportional, 1996-):

Māori, 13.8%. Source: Ethnicity question in the 2001 Census.

Norway

Sami in Finnmark, 0.4%. Source: Sami Statistics 2008, Statistics Norway

Sami are too few to pass the national legal threshold of 4% but are sufficiently numerous to exceed the threshold of exclusion for a constituency mandate in Finnmark fylke. Kven speak a mutually intelligible dialect of Finnish; they form 0.3% of the population and live in Finnmark and Troms fylker but are too few to surpass the threshold of exclusion for a constituency seat in either.

Poland

No minorities exceed threshold without exemption from lower threshold. Below is the share of minorities that could potentially support viable ethnic parties due to the elimination of the threshold for ethnic minority parties.

Poland 1 (First Electoral System, 1991)

Total: 0.8%. Silesians in Silesia and Opole, 0.4%. Germans in Opole and Silesia, 0.4%.

São Tomé and Príncipe

Angolares in Caué, 6.3%. Source: Ethnologue.

Angolares are counted as a minority but residents of Príncipe are not because Angolar is not mutually intelligible with Sãotomense but Principense is. The Angolares live in an isolated portion of the island of São Tomé.

Slovakia

Hungarian, 9.7%. Source: Statistical Office, 2001.

Slovenia

None. Note: Both the officially recognized Hungarian and Italian national minorities are below the threshold of exclusion.

South Africa

Total: 44.8%. Black IsiZulu, 23.8%. White, 9.6%. Coloured, 8.9%. Indian/Asian, 2.5%. Source: 2001 Census.

South Africa's racial minorities are also linguistically defined. Most White, Coloured, and Indian/Asian South Africans speak Afrikaans or English; these three groups also compose the overwhelming share of Afrikaans and English language speakers.

South Korea

None.

Spain

Total: 24.3%. Catalan in Catalonia, 14.7%. Galician in Galicia, 6.5%. Basque in Basque Country or Navarre, 3.1%. Source: Estimated share of population that understands the language and lives in the home autonomous community (or communities) of the language group based on 2001 linguistic censuses.

Greater numbers of people can understand rather than speak, or write Basque, Catalan, or Galician, so basing the size of each group on the share who understand provides for a broader definition of each language group. Spain's Constitution recognizes the Basque Country, Catalonia, and Galicia as "historical nationalities." Basque nationalists claim Navarre but that claim is strongly disputed by a majority of its population. Navarre has its own separate history of independence and autonomy within Spain.

Suriname

Total, 31.5%. Hindi/Sarnami in Nickerie, Paramaribo, and Saramacca, 14.5%. Maroons in Sipaliwini, Marowijne, and Paramaribo, 11.4%. Sranan/Creole in Coronie and Paramaribo, 4.1%. Javanese in Commewijne, 1.4%. Source: 2004 Census.

Includes non-Dutch language groups in constituencies in which their population share exceeds the threshold of exclusion.

Sweden

None. Note: Meänkieli and Sami are below the threshold of exclusion.

Switzerland

Total: 23.8%. Francophones in Cantons Bern, Fribourg, Geneva, Neuchâtel, Vaud, Jura, and Valais, 20.4%. Italian speakers in Canton Ticino, 3.4%. Source: 2000 Census.

Based on statistics for Swiss citizens. Neither Italian nor Romansh speakers exceeded the threshold of exclusion in Graubünden.

Taiwan

Total: 23%. Mainlanders, 15%. Hakka, 8%. Regional data unavailable so just used minorities above the 5% legal threshold to receive party list seats. Source: Li-Li Huang, James H. Liu, and Maanling Chang, 'The double identity' of Taiwanese Chinese: A dilemma of politics and culture rooted in history," Asian Journal of Social Psychology 7(2004): 149-68.

At 2%, Indigenous are too few to pass the legal threshold.

United Kingdom

Total: 16.4%. Scotland, 8.6%. Wales, 4.9%. Northern Ireland, 2.9%. Source: 2001 Census.

Racial minorities are not regionally concentrated and do not form a majority in any of the United Kingdom's countries or administrative divisions.

United States

None. Note: African Americans, Latinos, and Asians do not separately form a majority in any state.

Uruguay

None.

Note: Paralleling past definitions of federal or decentralized polities (Brancati 2009; Elazar 1987), countries are defined as decentralized if regional governments have constitutionally entrenched independent decision-making authority. Additionally, countries are coded as decentralized if they include regions that score 15.0 or higher on the Regional Authority Index (Hooghe, Marks and Schakel 2008) as all but one country with constitutionally protected authority have regions rated this high. Spain and the United Kingdom are the only two cases captured by this provision. Strong presidents serve as head of government and not only as symbolic head of state. As defined here, proportional representation excludes mixed systems unless they include an element designed to correct for disproportionality, as in the German system. It also excludes systems that award a bonus to the winning party or coalition, such as the current Greek and Italian systems. Nonetheless, it includes proportional systems that produce disproportionate results due to low district magnitude or a high legal threshold.
